

Abstract

This degree project is dedicated to a water measuring system. This work shows the basic requirements and the technical decision of microprocessor information-measuring system and offers structural and basic schemes of the device. A control program for microcontrollers was developed in C language. The basis of introduction of the developed system is confirmed by technical and economic calculations.