

Abstract

In this thesis work the existing systems and wireless local loop network, a comparative analysis of the "last mile", analyzed the features and characteristics of the radio interfaces, and types of services provided by the network.

The research paper explored the range of communication issues. The calculations of the number of users in the sector of energy of radio and radio coverage.

There were also questions of safety of life and given technical - economic justification and presented business - plan.