

Abstract

The thesis project examined the concept of entropy in the nonequilibrium system modifications, which directly takes into account the parameters reflecting the speed of the elementary processes in the system. The analysis of the number of subscribers of mobile operators. Built consolidated schedule in relative values between the leading companies.