

Annotation

In the diploma project, an analysis was made of the currently existing rescue robots. A prototype of a rescue robot was created, and a control system was developed. In the section on life safety, an analysis of working conditions in the laboratory was conducted, and artificial light calculation and calculation of the organization of work while working for a PC were also made. In the section of the feasibility study, the project costs were calculated and the social effect was determined.