

Abstract

In the diploma project, according to the assignment, a cross-platform application was developed and implemented on UWP technology, designed to implement systems between IT outsourcer companies and their customers.

During the graduation project, it was pointed out that this software package allows reporting, ordering and informativeness when working with an IT-outsourcing company.

In the last chapters of the diploma project, issues of feasibility study, cost of project development and life support are considered.