

Annotation

This thesis project describes the design and development of a private cloud by the example of «Samruk–Kazyna» JSC. The introduction of a private cloud can reduce the cost of hardware and software, and also allows users to have remote access to necessary information of the company. Cloud infrastructure was developed with the help of OwnCloud technology. This system gives the possibility for storage organizing, synchronization and exchange of data, placed on external services.