Annotation

This thesis project designed to develop mobile applications on the Android platform for the firm «Makov Group» which provides services in the field of security. The application processes have been simplified the submission of applications for security systems and tools offered by the organization and provided the possibility of obtaining the necessary data.

In this regard, the analysis of the impact of mobile applications on the human body, created favourable conditions of work, and calculated the economic costs of developing the application.