Annotation

This thesis is designed to develop an information system implementing the accounting process of the company "Akniet pharmaceuticals". To create an information system thesis was compiled in PHP.

The problem of safety of vital activity was checked, during the development of the information system, the calculation coefficient of distribution of heat in the room was calculated. Also in the economic department was determined the cost of labor, the cost of labor and work efficiency.