

Annotation

This diploma project presents new guidelines in the information network of the company «RP TRADE», which make it easy to transmit information to customers of the company's services by converting the existing network into a multi-service network.

The diploma project presents a broad analysis of the Berkley DB control system, internal database, convergent asterisk computer telephony platform. In order to organize the project, the reason for choosing a multiservice network is prescribed.

The diploma project includes such sections as introduction, main part, used software, work with technologies and means of development, the course of project development.

The developed multiservice network is based on information and communication systems of the company, presents the possibilities and principles of work.