

ANNOTATION

In this thesis, an analysis of vulnerabilities during penetration into the operating system was conducted. Presents general information about the network attack. The methodology of software development is described, the tools for researching and finding vulnerabilities are defined, and examples of their operation are given.