

ANNOTATION

In this thesis project was carried out the reverse development of a malicious code, namely a virus - a cryptographer. Based on the work done, the extent of the damage caused by this malware was identified. It was determined what encryption algorithms are used in this tool, and all internal processes occurring when the virus is launched — the encryption code — are considered.