ANNOTATION

This thesis project is dedicated to the approach to reveal the malicious software for OC Android. The theoretical part describes the existing methods for analyzing Android application. In the practical part, I considered the method of detection of malicious software based on the representation of the Android application in the form of an image with subsequent analysis of the convolutional neural network.