

Abstract

The graduation project is devoted to the development of a home meteorological station based on Arduino. The issues of technology used to determine meteorological data are considered. The choice of the controller is made, the circuit diagram of the device and the software are developed. The project is a prototype, the technical solution of which is confirmed by a feasibility study.