Over the past decade, there have been dramatic changes in the country's economy. So far, they have not produced the expected economic results.

Progressive comprehensive privatization, radical liberalization of economic relations, the actual loss of state control over the economic situation in the country led to a decrease in gross domestic product, a decrease in the standard of living of people, an emergency reduction in investment.

In Kazakhstan, with the current state of energy, it is impossible to support the progressive growth of production and transport services.
