

Annotation

This graduation project is devoted to the consideration of the development of a residential automation system. The basis of which was taken schematically to assemble and program the Arduino Nano microcontroller. The issue of the operation of this graduation project is considered.

Air conditioning was also calculated and the calculation of artificial lighting was performed in the section "Life Safety".

In the "Economics" section, a business plan of a system of automated residential premises was calculated.