

Summary

In this thesis, questions are discussed about the technologies for sorting solid household waste that are currently used by enterprises. A system for identifying objects such as plastic bags was created.

Life safety issues were also considered, a business plan was drawn up and a payback period for the developed project was calculated.