

Summary

The diploma project is dedicated to the development of a water flowmeter. Technological and operational issues are considered, software is developed. A prototype was also developed. An analysis of the microclimate in the design of the system is carried out. The feasibility of implementing the developed system is confirmed by a technical and economic calculation.