

Annotation

This graduate project is dedicated to the development of special-purpose robot devices with a microcontroller control system. The paper deals with technological and design issues. In addition, a control program was developed in the development environment "Arduino IDE" for the ESP8266 microcontroller. In the technical and economic part, the costs for the development and installation of the developed system are calculated.