

Abstract

Today, it is nearly impossible to imagine our world without electric power, generally which is transferred through cables. This kind of transmission has some variety of disadvantages, such as power loss while transmission, inconvenience and dangerous of use. This diploma project will consider methods of wireless transmission of electricity, their application in the future, as well as select the most promising and feasible of them.