

Abstract

Diploma project dedicated to the modernization of using network, which will provide more customers with high-speed internet access in the city Almaty. The thesis describes the characteristics and architecture of the network of this technology.

Calculations are made to compare and analyze the two networks. The code that defines the parameters of the antenna is written for different modulations.