

Annotation

Today there are no doubts that the creation of web services is an inextricable part of modern development of our sustainable life. At the present time, all projected and dynamically developing technologies are created to facilitate human life.

This graduation project addresses the development of a book rental website.

The application was developed using Python, a high-level general-purpose programming language and the Django framework. This uses the following tools: Python libraries, Django, Atom, and HTML.