

THE SUMMARY

In this graduation project, the information system website "Animal Shelter" was developed. The graduation project was developed for the public volunteer association "Green Light" to control and attract the public. Currently, information technologies are being implemented in all large companies, the developed website will allow the manager to remotely control the company. The website, designed for a volunteer association, fully meets the objectives of the company, which confirms the relevance of the chosen topic.

To provide an information system, a selection of technologies was made that will allow the program to function on different personal computers and smartphones. Costs for the development of this product were calculated, and life safety issues were considered.
