ANOTATION

This is a thesis "Development of the laboratory work methology on the discipline "Social Engineering in the aspect of information security and the organization of protection. Several attack methods in social engineering were put into practice, and based on the data obtained, methods of protection or prevention were proposed. In particular, tests were conducted and anti-virus programs were used to gain trust and access to information of a user of a social network, phishing site and protection. Trend Micro Internet Security and AnsTester were used. It was shown how to avoid scams in social networks. A social engineering training was conducted.