

Annotation

The main idea of the work is to determine the principles of regulating emissions of pollutants into the air for industrial enterprises, taking into account the environmental standards adopted in the Republic of Kazakhstan to improve the level of environmental safety in the city.

When writing the work, methods of analytical synthesis of scientific and technical results were used; processing of research results using methods of mathematical statistics and analysis using PCs; conducting summary calculations of the level of air pollution for city districts; methods of collection, grouping, analysis. The thesis consists of an introduction, five sections, a conclusion, a list of references and a graphic work in the form of slides