

Abstract

The goal of this diploma project is to create a programmable mechanical hand with functions similar to that of a human hand. The invention relates to the field of robotics and can be used in the creation of humanoid robots. Its program was developed on the Arduino platform, so that it can be controlled by a mobile phone via Bluetooth.

Life safety studies were conducted in the project. In the economic part of this project, the cost and payback time were determined.