

Abstract

This thesis project examines technologies for capturing network packets at high packet rates and classifying network traffic. Corresponding open source solutions have been tested. In terms of life safety, the necessary issues have been analyzed. In the economic part, the price of software product development was calculated.