

Abstract

In this dissertation work presents the results of a study of working conditions in the workplace.

The explanatory note contains an analytical review of modern systems, methods and means of monitoring workplaces, methods for assessing working conditions at workplaces equipped with personal computers, basics of rationing electrostatic and electromagnetic fields, the effect of electromagnetic fields on the human body, the results of experimental studies of electromagnetic field levels at workstations equipped personal computers.