

Abstract

This master's thesis the dynamic parameters of the vibratory device are considered and the stress-strain state of the joints is calculated. In the dissertation, the vibrations and stability of a horizontal tray mounted on a vibrating device are calculated, and its dynamic equations of uniform motion are created. In addition, the differential equations of the vibration device were developed, its design and automation were considered.