

Abstract

This is a master's thesis aimed at research methods to improve effectiveness of the contact center. When a call is received to operators' workplaces, the thesis provides statistical modeling based on the results of analytical evaluation to determine the impact of the protective time interval. Calculations were also made based on teletraffic formulas.