

Abstract

This master's thesis examines the effects of EMF on the human body when using a cell phone. In the dissertation, a special model of the human head was considered, according to which the specific absorption power was calculated. In addition, experiments were conducted using a P3-33M measuring device and a Geiger tube, and the maximum permissible levels of EMF and dose absorption of radiation were calculated.